UN STRUCTURE

The Charter of the United Nations was signed 26 June 1945, at the conclusion of the Conference on International Organization held in San Francisco. The UN has six main bodies:

1. The General Assembly is made up of 192 member states (countries), and is the major decision-making body of the United Nations. The GA began its 65th session in September 2010. Its president is elected for a one-year term.

The GA considers and makes recommendations on the general principles of development, peace and security, except where a dispute is being discussed by the Security Council. It initiates studies and makes recommendations to promote political cooperation, the development of international law, the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms and international collaboration in the economic, social, humanitarian, cultural, educational and health fields.

2. The Security Council has the primary responsibility to maintain international peace and security, and has the authority to send United Nations peace-keeping forces to help reduce tensions in troubled areas, to keep opposing forces apart, and to create conditions of calm. The Council may decide on enforcement measures, economic sanctions (such as trade embargoes) or collective military action.

The Council is made up of 15 member states, with five permanent members (China, France, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, and the United States) and ten members elected for two-year terms by the General Assembly. The presidency of the Council rotates monthly.

3. The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) is the central forum for discussing economic and social issues, and for formulating policy recommendations, which are submitted to the General Assembly. It is responsible for promoting higher standards of living, full employment, and economic and social progress; identifying solutions to economic, social and health problems; facilitating cultural and educational cooperation; and encouraging universal respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms.

ECOSOC considers these issues through a series of Commissions, as well as considers the work of related UN specialized agencies. The Council also receives reports from UN funds and programs. ECOSOC consults with academics, business sector representatives and others constituting more than 3,000 registered non-governmental organizations. The Lutheran World Federation has consultative status with ECOSOC and the Lutheran Office for World Community carries out that representation at UN Headquarters.

4. The Secretariat consists of an international staff (more than 44,000) working in duty stations around the world led by the Secretary General. The candidate for Secretary General is recommended to the General Assembly by the Security Council for a renewable five-year term.

5. International Court of Justice. With 15 judges, the Court has a dual role: to settle in accordance with international law the legal disputes submitted to it by countries, and to give advisory opinions on questions referred to it by authorized international organs and agencies in The Hague, Netherlands. The number of decisions made by the ICJ has been relatively small, but there is an increased willingness to use the Court since the 1980s, especially among developing countries. The US withdrew from compulsory jurisdiction in 1986, meaning it accepts the court's jurisdiction only on a case-to-case basis.

6. Trusteeship Council. Initially established to transition countries out of colonial rule, this body suspended operations in 1994 and is to be phased out under the recently initiated reform process.

LEADER PROFILES

General Assembly President

H.E. Mr. Joseph Deiss is the current President of the General Assembly. The president plays a significant role in setting the agenda of the General Assembly, as well as forming consensus between member states on contentious issues. Joseph Deiss was elected on 11 June 2010. He succeeds Dr. Ali Abdussalam Treki, who served as the president of the 64th General Assembly. Deiss, born in Fribourg, Switzerland, in 1946, served for six years on the Federal Council of Switzerland, a post he held from 1999 until 2006. During this time, he served as the Foreign Minister (1999 until 2002), held the position for Economics Minister (2003 until 2006), and was President of the Swiss Confederation in 2004. He has a special focus on world trade, establishing the G-10, a coalition of ten countries whose main import is agriculture. He also has an interest in Sustainable Development, chairing the UN Economic Commission for Europe. Mr. Deiss has previously served as a member in the Swiss Parliament (1991-1999), which included such tasks as reviewing the Swiss Federal Constitution and serving as Vice President of the Parliament's Foreign Affairs Committee (1995-1997). He is the honorary recipient of Japan's Grand Cordon of the Order of the Rising Sun (2008) and France's Officier de l'Ordre national de la Legion d'honneur (2007).

United Nations Secretary-General

Ban Ki-moon took office as 8th Secretary General on January 1, 2007. Formerly a foreign minister of Korea, he was recommended for the post by the Security Council to the General Assembly, which elected him by verbal acclamation. South Korea's prominence on the world stage has increased dramatically since joining the United Nations in 1991.

Born June 13, 1944, Mr. Ban attended Korea's most prestigious institute of higher learning, Seoul National University, where he received a degree in international relations in 1970. He earned a master's degree in public administration from Harvard University in 1985. Mr. Ban's first overseas posting was in India, and he also served in Austria, the United Nations and the US along with other positions in Seoul before becoming foreign minister in January 2004.

According to the Charter of the United Nations the Secretary General is the "chief administrative officer" but he can also be entrusted with other functions by the various organs of the UN. Also, the Secretary General brings "to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security"

Ban Ki-moon's goal is to "achieve a stronger United Nations for a better world". As his priorities he names "peace and Security", especially in the Middle East and in Africa, "Non-proliferation and disarmament", "Development", "Climate Change", "Human Rights" and "Un Reform".

SNAPSHOT: WORK OF THE UN

The Human Rights Council was formed in March 2006 by vote of the General Assembly to replace the mainly discredited Human Rights Commission. The Human Rights Council will meet six times per year, and as needed when emergencies arise. The former Human Rights Commission only met once a year. Members of the Council will also be subject to a new universal periodic review mechanism during their term of membership. The Council is comprised of 47 members, which must show substantial periodic commitments to human rights. The Lutheran World Federation monitors human rights from their headquarters in Geneva, and periodically submits reports and makes oral statements on specific country situations.

The United Nations Department for Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) has 15 current peacekeeping operations. These missions are staffed by more than 84,000 military/ civilian police and UN volunteers from 115 countries:

DPKO efforts assist in planning, preparing, managing, and directing UN peacekeeping operations. Other responsibilities for DPKO are assisting in political processes, reforming judicial systems, training law enforcement, disarming and reintegrating former combatants, and supporting refugees. The current annual budget for United Nations peacekeeping is approximately $7.83 billion. UNAMA, the United Nation's Assistance Mission in Afghanistan, is an integrated mission centered on development of political affairs and humanitarian issues. With 1600 civilian staff (with 80% Afghan natives) and 18 regional offices, this is but one of the more complex peacekeeping operations.

The Peacebuilding Commission, a subsidiary body of the General Assembly and Security Council, is new to the work of the United Nations. Implemented as part of recent reforms, the commission is aimed at further stabilizing countries after war has ended. Burundi and Sierra Leone and recently Guinea-Bissau are the first countries to be taken up by the specially tailored committees. See www.un.org/peace/peacebuilding.

The Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), adopted by all Member States in 2000, are a set of clearly-defined, measurable objectives to eradicate poverty, hunger, and environmental degradation by 2015. At the request of Kofi Annan, economist Jeffrey Sachs drafted the plan to implement the goals called the "Millennium Project". International organizations, governments, and private sector groups have coordinated their anti-poverty efforts around the MDGs. Civil Society is involved in advocating for the goals through the Millennium Campaign and the Global Call to Action against Poverty. The ONE Campaign is the United States branch of this movement. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) inaugurated its ONE Lutheran campaign in 2005. Other Lutheran Church bodies are part of Global Call to Action against Poverty. For example, the Lutheran Bishop Dr Zephania Kameeta of Namibia has been appointed as one of his country's ambassadors for the Global Call to Action against Poverty.

NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS (NGO)

NGOs have made vital contributions to the UN since its establishment in 1945. Currently, there are more than 3,000 NGOs associated with the UN Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC). NGOs with ECOSOC accreditation can make oral statements at the UN, as well as submit written reports. NGOs are given their UN status after an application and review process from a committee of governments. NGOs can also affiliate themselves with the UN Department of Public Information (DPI).

NGOs with DPI-status commit to sharing information about the UN to their members, but cannot make official statements at the UN. Many NGOs, especially from developing countries, do not have affiliation with the UN because it requires a lengthy application process.

This does not prevent the UN from working with NGOs at the local level through UN country offices, and on occasion inviting these NGOs to participate in UN meetings where their expertise is needed.

The Lutheran World Federation (LWF) is officially recognized as a NGO by ECOSOC. Since 1973, the Lutheran Office for World Community (LOWC) is monitoring the work of the UN on behalf of the LWF and the ELCA. The office has participated in a variety of historic issues. The independence of Namibia was a major policy goal at a time when few others advocated for the people in that land. LOWC assisted the LWF in 1989 and into the 1990s as it helped mediate the differences between the warring parties in Guatemala. In 1993, the LOWC participated in the World Conference on Human Rights held in Vienna, Austria. It has worked for human rights on behalf of people in Ethiopia, El Salvador, Liberia, South Africa, the Middle East and Eastern Europe. Dennis W. Frado is Director of LOWC since 1991.

OTHER UN ENTITIES, PROGRAMS AND FUNDS

The various programs of the UN provide vital work in countries around the world. These are of particular note:

UNDP, the United Nations Development Program is a clearing house for funds with offices in individual nations doing local development related to human rights, justice, anti-corruption, and good governance. UNIFEM (United Nations Development Fund for Women) and UNV (United Nations Volunteers) fall under UNDP.

UNFPA, the United Nations Population Fund, is an international development agency that promotes the right of every woman, man, and child to enjoy a life of health and equal opportunity. UNFPA supports countries in using population data for policies and programs to reduce poverty and to ensure that every pregnancy is wanted, every birth is safe, every young person is free of HIV/AIDS, and every girl and woman is treated with dignity and respect.

UNAIDS, the Joint United Nations Program on HIV/AIDS, brings together the efforts and resources of ten UN system organizations to the global AIDS response. It has an advisory capacity to the Global Fund to fight HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria.

UNHCR, Office for the United Nations High Commission for Refugees, is mandated to lead and coordinate international action to protect refugees and resolve refugee problems worldwide. Its primary purpose is to safeguard the rights and well-being of refugees by ensuring the right to asylum and safe refuge in another state, with the option to return home voluntarily, integrate locally, or to resettle. The Lutheran World Federation and the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Services have both worked with and on behalf of UNHCR.

UNICEF, United Nations Children's Fund, works for the rights of the Child with the following priorities: girl's education, immunizations, child protection, HIV/AIDS, and early childhood health and education.

UN Women is the newest organization under the United Nations and was the consolidation of four distinct entities. UN Women works for gender equality and the empowerment of women by supporting inter-governmental bodies at the UN and member states and by holding the UN system accountable to its own commitments.
